

Contribution ID: 614

Type: Plenary talk

Fast Radio Bursts and the CHIME/FRB Project

Fast Radio Bursts are millisecond-duration bursts of radio waves arriving generally from cosmological distances. Their nature remains unknown. Here I will review the latest on what is known about this mysterious phenomenon, concentrating on what has been learned from the CHIME telescope, a digital radio telescope operating in Canada, that offers an unprecedented view of the FRB population.

Presenter: KASPI, Victoria (McGill University)